The Ghost(ed)

A Halloween classic or a sarcastic twist, what's not to love? The perfect costume to shake your boo-ty.

You will need:

A pair of scissors

You might need:

A 'left on read' speech bubble print-out and a sharpie (unless you don't want it to be permanent)

Step 1: Cut out two small circles for eyeholes

Step 2 (Ghosted): Stick your 'left on read' speech bubble onto your costume

Step 3: Write, 'you can't see me' on the sheet

Bowling pins

They see me bowling, they hatin'.
This is all about getting together with your mates and moving as one.

You will need:

A pair of scissors,
a red marker
pen and maybe
some knee pads

Step 1: Cut out eye holes

Step 2: Draw two horizontal red lines across your sheet

Remember: No more than 10 participants of course! Bonus points will always be added if you are constantly falling-down.

Bearded & wise

So, you want to be an all-powerful wizard?
Or, do you want to behave like the high-street and celebrate Christmas at the same time as Halloween? We've got you covered!

You will need:

That trusty pair
of scissors

Step 1: Take your sheet, and cut to the size of beard you'd like

Step 2: Tie your beard around your face and abracadabra...

The Angel

Another classic that requires so little work, it should be a sin! All treat, no tricks.

You will need:

a wire coat hanger and gold tinsel and if you really want to go deep, a golden harp but we understand that increases the cost!

Step 1: Tie the beautifully crisp bed sheet around you

Step 2: Wrap the gold tinsel around a wire coat hanger and mould it to the shape of a halo

The Superhero

Is it a bird, is it a plane, no! Is it someone dressed as a superhero with a beautifully laundered sheet as a cape, yes!

You will need:

A forgiving audience and maybe some muscles

Step 1: Tie up your sheet at one corner, leaving space for your head to fit through

Step 2: There is no step two here but you look amazing!

The Greek god

Even more powerful than a superhero you say?
Wanna to let your inner Zeus loose,
eureka, we've got it!

You will need:

Safety pins (or you can knot the sheet) and a book about Greek gods for those history buffs in the room

You might need:

Water

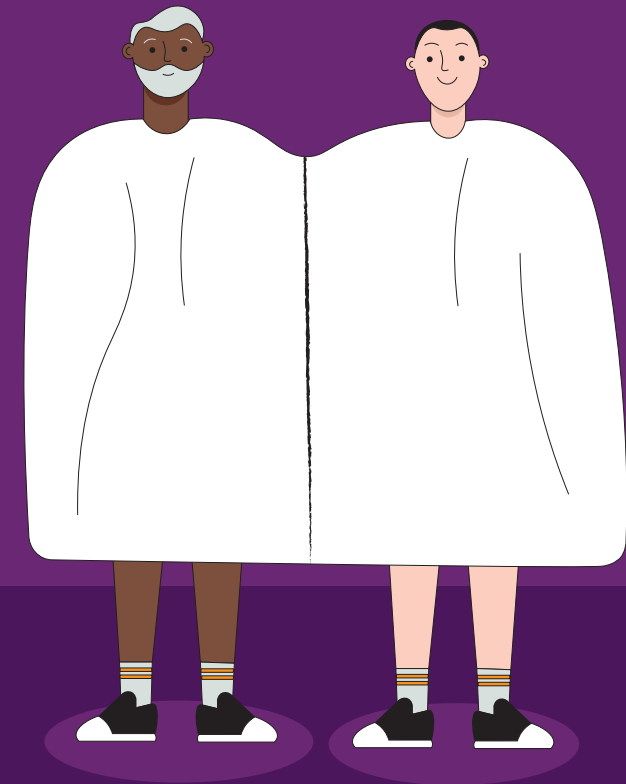

Step 1: Drape the beautiful bed sheet over one shoulder and spread out both sides

Step 2: Secure both sides of the sheet, leaving one shoulder exposed

Step 3 (Poseidon): To become the god of sea...I think you know what the water's for

Turkey teeth

For the creatively inclined and culturally relevant group of friends, here's your chance to turn up like you've just stepped off a budget airline.
You go Ghoul!

Step 1: Cut out several head holes in your large sheet to represent the number of 'teeth' you will have

Step 2: Draw out the markings for your teeth, in line with the holes

And remember: The more unnaturally symmetrical the better insert big smile emoji

You will need:

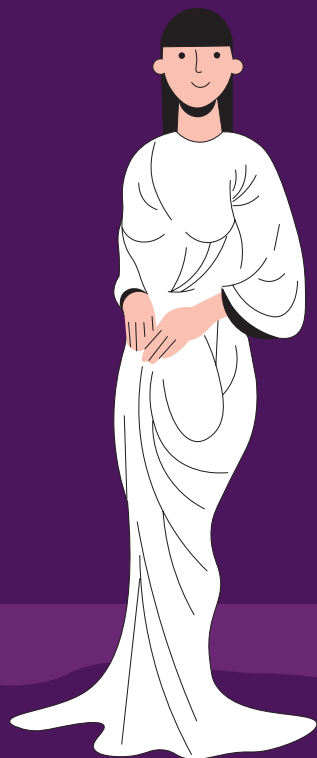

Your trusty marker-pen and a pair of scissors

The WET Gala

So, you're the fashionista of the group, are you?
Well then, it's time to get red-carpet ready because if you've got it, haunt it!

You will need:

A bucket of water, wet look gel and some safety pins

Step 1: Dip your entire sheet in the bucket of water

Step 2: Drape your sheet around you and secure it in the style you want. If you'd rather not bother with the water, you can just put the sheet on your body and cover it in wet look gel... according to a certain Cat at a certain gala, this year

Step 3: [DISCLAIMER] Do not catch a cold – welcome to the WET Gala!

An ale fail

Is there anything more frightening than a terribly poured pint of beer or ale?

You will need:

A print-out logo of
your bevvie of choice

You might need:

A brown or black blanket depending on the pint you choose.

Step 1: Dye your sheet halfway through or tie
an ale-coloured blanket around your waist

Step 2: Stick a printed logo over it

Step 3: Practice saying "cheers" a LOT

There are thousands-ish of different applications and ways you can change your beautiful sheet into something truly spooky this Halloween season.
